Q.

The GoI Act of 1935 gave autonomy to the Provinces, but it was not enough to fulfil the desires of Indians. Discuss?

Ans.

1. The GoI Act of 1935 was an elaborate extension of GoI Act of 1919. It was passed by the British Government with the aim to pacify and restrain Indian masses from developing into another anti-British movement by creating communal feud between them. It remains the longest Act passed by the British Government & even our present day Indian Constitution finds its root in GoI Act of 1935.
